WHAT ARE CCSP® AND DACBSP® CERTIFICATIONS?

How do chiropractors achieve sports certification? There are two certification levels:

1st Certified Chiropractic Sports Physician® (CCSP®) has completed a minimum of 100 hours of post doctoral education in specialized sports medicine topics and must pass a Board examination.

2nd Diplomate American Chiropractic Board of Sports Physicians® (DACBSP®) is the highest level of achievement. The doctor has completed over 300 postgraduate classroom hours, plus over 100 hours of on-field experience. The DACBSP® must pass a rigorous written and practical examination and must publish a paper in a clinical journal.

How do certified sports chiropractors maintain their credentials? Upon reaching either the CCSP® or DACBSP® level, the sports chiropractor remains abreast of the latest research and treatment innovations through continuing education and field experience. The American Chiropractic Board of Sports Physicians™ (ACBSP®) offers an annual seminar to update the doctors on the latest research and techniques.

How do I know the certifications are valid and meaningful? The CCSP® and DACBSP® certification programs are taught by accredited chiropractic colleges and the examinations are administered by the American Chiropractic Board of Sports Physicians™. Both certification programs are accredited by the National Commission for Certifying Agencies (NCCA), a national multi-industry organization that ensures certification programs adhere to modern standards of practice for the certification industry, including objective assessment of professional knowledge and competence.
